01 — THE PROBLEM

Most athletes never get an agent. Most deals are small.

10–20%

is what NFL agents typically earn on endorsement deals, ESPN reported in February 2026. The NFLPA caps agent fees on playing contracts at 3% and the NBPA at 4%; MLB and NHL have no cap. No union caps NIL fees.

$60

was the median NIL deal in 2025, in the NCAA's NIL Assist data; the average was $5,594. Most athletes handle small deals on their own.

~2%

of NCAA athletes turn pro. The other 98% still sign deals, camps and appearances with no one in their corner.

Never sold.

THE DEALS

Opportunities, from public sources.

Casting calls, brand posts, deal announcements, sponsor and community programs, and press, as threads in the Web. A rate range on each thread is coming. Leave for Brands, where local businesses will post deals, is not open yet.

THE RATE · COMING

What athletes like you charge.

Coming: a per-deliverable rate for a post, a story, a video, an appearance and a signing, built from the public record and public rate data, with past deals lined up against it.

THE PAPERWORK

The disclosure packet, inside the window.

72 hours in Pennsylvania high school. 5 business days for NIL Go, on deals of $600 or more. Leave fills the packet from the uploaded contract and counts down where the rule sets one. The athlete sends it.

THE MONEY · LEAVE'S CUT $0

What each contract pays, and when.

Each uploaded contract lists its payments with their dates and amounts, and the athlete marks each one paid. Leave doesn't handle deal money and takes no cut of it.

Infrastructure for sports.

A connected network. Every athlete on it for life. Every team and brand paying athletes through it. One set of rails under all of sports.

EVERY ATHLETE

Childhood to post-career.

One profile, one record of every deal and every payment, from the first youth camp to the second act. The athlete owns it. No agent, no cut.

EVERY TEAM AND BRAND

Post, pay, done.

Brands and teams post; athletes who fit see the post and decide, on terms both sides understand. They will pay through Stripe, which will hold the payment and release it to the athlete on delivery. The athlete pays no cut.

A MOVEMENT

”Leave your agent.”

Athletes tell athletes. When the whole locker room is on it, the network is the product and the agent model is over.

The other side of the table, coming. Same rails, same rule: no cut from the athlete.

PAY ATHLETES FROM A PHONE

Appearances, content, bonuses, revenue share.

Clubs and athletic departments will pay through Stripe, which will hold each payment until delivery. Dual-control approvals, an append-only ledger, and a CAPS-ready export for revenue-share reporting, under the College Sports Commission's cap of approximately $21.58 million per school in 2026–27.

THE WEB, TEAM EDITION

Who fits this team, and why.

Weighted factors the front office can adjust: positional need, budget fit, contract timing, public performance, availability (public games played), reach, local ties. Opted-in athletes only, using what they chose to share.

ONE RAIL

Offer → contract → pay.

An offer is the team's own words. It lands in the athlete's Leave as a contract, Pending your OK. Only opted-in athletes are visible, never their private strands; nobody under 18 is discoverable or payable. The organization will pay a small fee. Leave is never an agent.

Three things changed this year.

2025–26

AI assistants are the front door

ChatGPT, Claude and Gemini all take connectors through the open MCP standard. Leave plugs in where athletes already talk.

2025

NIL became a paycheck

The House settlement lets schools pay athletes directly, up to approximately $21.58 million per school in 2026–27. More money, more contracts, the same few agents.

The rules got written down

NIL Go reviews third-party deals of $600 or more within five business days, and S. 4668, which would register agents and cap college endorsement fees at 5%, passed the Senate in September 2026. Leave puts the rules in plain words.
